12th International Symposium on Crystalline Organic Metals, Superconductors and Magnets

Welcome Message

Reizo Kato Chair, Organizing Committee / RIKEN

The 12th International Symposium on Crystalline Organic Metals, Superconductors and Magnets (ISCOM2017) will be held in Zao, Miyagi, Japan, from September 24 to September 29, 2017. The ISCOM is a long-running conference series in the field of conducting, magnetic, and dielectric molecular crystals started in Mittleberg (Austria, 1995), followed by Sesimbra (Portugal, 1997), Oxford (United Kingdom, 1999), Rusutsu (Japan, 2001), Port-Bourgenay (France, 2003), Key West (United States, 2005), Peniscola (Spain, 2007), Niseko (Japan, 2009), Poznan-Gniezno (Poland, 2011), Montreal (Canada, 2013), and Bad Gögging (Germany, 2015). The symposium will be a forum of comprehensive and interdisciplinary discussion on the latest developments and future of chemistry, physics, and engineering of crystalline molecular materials. The venue for the symposium is located at the foot of Mount Zao, one of the 100 famous mountains in Japan. You can enjoy the beauty of nature and fruitful scientific discussions. We are looking forward to seeing you in Zao for ISCOM2017.

Scope

The ISCOM symposium will attract scientists across the world to present the latest advances and new avenues of research on the following topics:

1. Synthesis of New Molecules and Molecular Materials
2. Molecular Superconductors
3. Molecular Magnets, Spin Liquids, Single Molecule Magnets
4. Molecular Dirac Electron Systems
5. Molecular pi-d Systems
6. Single-component Molecular Conductors
7. New Functional Materials
8. Physics of Low Dimensional Molecular Materials
9. Electron Correlation in Molecular Materials
10. Dielectric Properties of Molecular Materials
11. Non-equilibrium Phenomena in Molecular Materials
12. Basic Science for Devices Based on Molecular Materials
13. Photo-induced Phenomena in Molecular Materials
14. Theory, Modeling, and Computation

Call for Papers

A one-page abstract written in English (A4-size:210×297mm) is required for each presentation by April 28, 2017.

When preparing abstracts, please adhere to the guidelines and use the template on ISCOM2017 website.

Abstracts can only be submitted via the website.
